Scottish Whisky Regions

Scotch malt whiskies tend to be grouped within a number of regional categories, usually Speyside, Highland, Campbeltown, Islay, Islands and Lowland, though sub-divisions are frequently made within these categories. Such classifications really exist for geographical convenience rather than stylistic similarity. Within each there will be major variations of character, which is one of the factors that make Scotch malt whisky so fascinating!

SPEYSIDE

More than half of Scotland's 89 operational malt whisky distilleries are located within the Speyside region of the north-east. For many aficionados, Speyside is the whisky region. It is to malt, as Cognac is to brandy.

Speyside boomed during the late 19th century, when blended whiskies began to take the world by storm. The smooth, comparatively subtle character of many Speyside malts was ideally suited for blends destined to be assaulted by soda siphons in gentlemen's clubs and officers' messes around the British Empire. No fewer than 21 distilleries were built on Speyside during the 1890s alone.

Today, Speyside remains home to many of the greatest names in Scotch whisky, such as Glenfiddich, Glenfarclas, Glen Grant, The Glenlivet and The Macallan. Stylistically, Speysides vary from the light, soft, floral nature of whiskies like Knockando and Cardhu to weighty, more complex and heavily sherried malts such as Mortlach and The Macallan.

HIGHLAND

According to historic excise legislation, Highland malt whiskies are distilled north of a line stretching between Greenock on the Firth of Clyde in the west and Dundee on the Firth of Tay in the east. Whisky commentators often sub-divide the vast Highland region into a number of smaller areas, within which there may be stylistic similarities.

Geographically, the Highland region of malt whiskies embraces Scotland's most northerly mainland distillery of Pulteney, in the Caithness port of Wick, and it's most westerly in the shape of Oban. Interestingly, although so far apart, these two whiskies share similar characteristics, in that both are comparatively dry, with a whiff of sea salt about them.

Some of the leading – though incredibly diverse – Highland single malts are the complex Clynelish spirit from the east coast of Sutherland, Dalwhinnie, Royal Lochnagar, Glengoyne, Aberfeldy and Edradour.

CAMPBELTOWN

Once the 'whisky capital' of Scotland, with no fewer than 21 working distilleries during the 1880s, Campbeltown lies near the southern tip of the remote Kintyre peninsula in Argyllshire.

When Campbeltown was at its distilling height, stylistically, its whiskies tended to be big-bodied, heavy, peaty beasts, eventually even referred to as 'stinking fish' when the quality was sacrificed for quantity during the 1920s. Today, Campbeltown's whisky-making industry is a shadow of its former self, with just Springbank, Glen Scotia and Glengyle in operation, though Springbank remains a classic malt with a worldwide reputation for excellence. Distilling recommenced at Glengyle in 2004, after almost eight decades of silence, and the Scotch Whisky Association subsequently reinstated Campbeltown as a separate whisky region, having previously included its whiskies in the Highland category for a number of years.

ISLAY

If Campbeltown was formerly Scotland's 'whisky capital', then Islay is most certainly the country's 'whisky island.' It is home to eight working distilleries, the most recently established being Kilchoman, a 'boutique,' farm-based operation which commenced production in 2005.

Once principally used for blending purposes, Islay single malts have become extremely fashionable during the past couple of decades, with Ardbeg, Bowmore, Lagavulin and Laphroaig. One of the great recent success stories of Islay has been the renaissance of Bruichladdich distillery since its reopening in 2001 after several years of silence.

Islays are generally regarded as the most assertive and distinctive of all Scotch malts, noted for their peaty and medicinal character, though there are great stylistic differences between the Kildalton distilleries of the southern Islay shore and the gentler, less dominant malts from further north.

LOWLAND

The Lowland region of malt whisky production lies south of the theoretical line between Greenock and Dundee, which separates the Highlands from the Lowlands. History has not been kind to the area, and today only Auchentoshan, near Glasgow, Bladnoch in the far west of Galloway, and Glenkinchie, south of Edinburgh, survive, along with a small-scale, farm-based distillery at Daft Mill in Fife. Many connoisseurs consider Rosebank, near Falkirk, to have been the best Lowland of all.

ISLANDS

There are nearly 800 islands off of Scotland's coastline, with only a few are inhabited; it's easy to see why the varying style differentiates from North to South. Of the inhabited islands, Orkney has two whisky distilleries, Scapa and Highland Park. Lewis & Harris is home to Abhainn Dearg. Talisker is located on Skye, Tobermory on Mull with Jura and Arran located on their namesake islands. Although diverse in flavours, peat and salinity are found in all Islands whiskies; the latter is because of the sea's vicinity.

Talisker is currently the largest Island distillery in Scotland, with a capacity of 2.6 litres; you'll be sure to find a bottle of this in most bars around the World.

Malt Whisky

ISLAY
	ABV	per 25ml
Ardbeg 10yr Islay's most heavily peated malt, and also one of its most complex. Smoke galore as well as marmalade, lime and subtle spice.	46%	£10.00

The Glover Whisky

The Glover is a unique whisky created to honour the achievements of a unique man, Thomas Blake Glover, and the historical relationship between Scotland and Japan. Thomas Blake Glover was born in the thriving fishing port of Fraserburgh on the north-east coast of Scotland, where his father was the Chief Coastguard Officer.

In the early 1860s he was also involved in arranging an (illegal) trip to Britain for five senior members of the Choshu Clan, and later fifteen members of the powerful Satsuma Clan, based in the south of the country.

These men would play an important part in promoting Western technology and ultimately became very senior members of the government which overthrew the old regime with the restoration of the Emperor Meiji in 1868. The new government was dedicated to learning from the West, encouraging trade and directly supporting business and industry and Thomas Glover soon became a leading figure in the industrialization of Japan.

Among many other ventures he developed the first modern coal mine in the country, at Takashima, had a dry dock built in Aberdeen and shipped to Nagasaki, founded the shipbuilding company which would later become the Mitsubishi Corporation and backed the establishment of the Japan's first large-scale brewery, becoming head of the Japan Brewery Company in 1894.

THE GLOVER 18 – £15.00

Very complex, and needs time for one to properly appreciate. A hint of smoke, more coal-like, but that's bound together intensely with heat from the wood and cereal grist. Grapefruit, melon. Dark chocolate. Walnuts. Rye bread. Vanilla, and heather honey.

The Dalmore Constellation Collection

The Dalmore Constellation Collection brings together, for the first time, a spectrum of vintages created at the iconic Dalmore Highland distillery between the years 1964 and 1992.

Initially consisting of 21 individual releases, these magnificent, bold whiskies have spent their lives finessing in the finest casks from around the world. Bottled at natural cask strength and at natural colour they have ensured that none of the collection's character has been diluted.

This refinement is matched by their presentation in hand-blown crystal decanters each engraved by hand and adorned with a solid silver stag, each decanter is as unique as the spirit within.

Vintage 1979, Cask 594 48.5% ABV £250.00 (25ml)

Colour: Shimmering Honeyed Gold.

Nose: Honey, peaches, nectarines and vanilla ice cream. Followed by notes of fresh apple, pear, apricots and lemongrass.

Taste: Spicy pineapple, tropical fruit salad and caramel fudge with flashes of lemon cake, frangipane, rose hip syrup and macarons. Followed by Bramley apples with peaches and cream, Turkish delight, spiced sherbet and kiwi fruits.

Vintage 1980, Cask 2140 52.1% ABV £225.00 (25ml)

Colour: Rich mahogany with russet highlights.

Nose: Aromas of ginger spice and spicy coffee follow warm hints of fresh oranges, tangerines and lemongrass.

Taste: Ripened bananas, marzipan and spicy coffee, with a tang of orange rind, pulp of pear, coupled with layers of ginger spice, crushed apples and toffee apple.

Vintage 1991, Cask I 57.9% ABV £215.00 (25ml)

Colour: Radiating with flashing yellow light and gold.

Nose: Cinnamon spice, marzipan, nutmeg and Cuban cigars give way to peaches, apples, damsons and pears. Whispers of hazelnuts, Morello cherries, pineapple and Parma ham follow.

Taste: Brandy, grapefruit, banana fritters, crushed almonds and Gazpacho Andaluz, with fresh layers of sultanas, caramel fudge, fig cake and mulled wine.

Vintage 1992, Cask 18 53.8% ABV £215.00 (25ml)

Colour: Mahogany gold with shimmering highlights or ruby amber.

Nose: Ripe plums, citrus fruits and marzipan with whispers of ginger spice, mangos and fleshy grape pulp.

Taste: Sweet pear, thick chunky marmalade, bitter chocolate and crushed almonds.

The Connoisseurs Choice

Connoisseurs Choice Label by Gordon and MacPhail.

During the mid-1960s Gordon & MacPhail of Elgin, Scotland launched a range of single malts whiskies under the brand name 'Connoisseurs Choice'.

Prior to this launch, many of the whiskies that the range featured would not have been available as single malt.

After 50 years the Connoisseurs Choice label still retains this exclusive nature with a range of rare and sought after single malt whiskies from distilleries throughout Scotland.

“Brewing in Scotland goes back 3,000 years although the Ancient Egyptians perfected the technique 5,000 years ago.

Archaeologist Merryn Dineley has suggested that ale could have been made from barley at Skara Brae and at other sites dated to the Neolithic.

The ale would have been flavoured with meadowsweet in the manner of a Kvass or Gruit made by various North European tribes including the Celts and the Picts.”

Port & Fortified Wine

	ABV	Bottle	Glass 75ml
LBV Port On the nose, cassis and blackberry jam with hints of smoke and spice.	20%	£70.00	£7.00
Quinta do Noval 2012, Unfiltered A typically sweet, plump and fleshy port from the Vargellas vineyard.	20%	£100.00	£10.00
Croft 1985 From the excellent 1985 vintage the Croft has a classic full and robust style. There are still plenty of clean cherry notes on the nose and palate, with a slightly roasted-nut, cherry nose. The port has a well-defined backbone and medium tannins. Very balanced.	20%	£110.00	£11.00
Tawny Port 10 year old Deep Tawny colour complex with aromas rich, mature and fruity.	20%	£70.00	£7.00
Madeira 1954 Deep golden colour. Intensely aromatic with some floral notes and lovely dried fruit and nut nuances.	19%	£350.00	N/A
Madeira Barbeito 3yrs old A background note of honey. On the palate a big rush of grapefruit with a toffee character.	19%	£70.00	£7.00
Marsala Pellegrino Superiore Sweet, full, warm and harmonic with a dried fruit finish.	18%	£70.00	£7.00

ABERDEEN

BON-ACCORD-TOAST

“Happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again!”

“Bon-Accord” was the password used by the Aberdeen citizens of Aberdeen in 1308 when they rose up, killed the English garrison and captured the town of Robert the Bruce.

Bon Accord is now the motto of the City of Aberdeen
